sales in May over April, which in turn showed an 18 per cent increase over March.

"That the advance in automotive equipment production and sales has been orderly and sound is due to several factors, among them the fact that the market was depleted when production began its fresh increase last year, better prices, a realization that the industry is not selling merely automobiles but is selling transportation and the big development in bus transportation. Every city in the country has great potentialities in this direction, both in interurban and intraurben transportation. Busses have become specially created units for mass transportation."

Mr. Meyers also foresees great developments for the industry in foreign

Manufacturers Feel That the Advance Will Continue Through Month of August, Says Association Man

Despite the great expansion in recent months in the automotive industries there is little danger of inflation, in the opinion of Sidney S. Meyers, general counsel to the Motor and Accessories Manufacturers' Association, who has just returned from the Middle West and a trip to Washington. "Sentiment rmong the manufacturers of motors and other automobile accessories inclines toward a continued good business into August. Of course there are hound to be some recessions from the sound to be some recessions to be some recessions to be some them. The plain fact is," he added, "that Americans can build better cars, on the average, than Europeans can."

Discussing the motor and accessories business for May, Mr. Meyers said the government co-operating strongly with manufacturers along this line and tringing good results. There is much better contact between business and the government than ever before, he said. The possibilities of foreign trade in the automotive lines, he asserted, are based on the fact that America has a head start on other countries, that our manufacturers ulong this line and tringing good results. There is much better contact between business and the government than ever before, he government than ever before, he said. The possibilities of foreign trade in the automotive lines, he asserted, are based on the fact that America has a head start on other countries, that our manufacturers understand the theory and practice of mass production, the simplification and interchangeability of parts, and also have a unique gealus for machine methods and a real knowledge of transportation problems and how to overcome them.
